Actor and film extra, Darren has a passion for film and the buzz of being on set.

His first role was as Sam Neill's picture double and stand-in, for the character "Colin", in director/actor Jeremy Sims's film "Rams" (2020).

Darren has since performed in both extra and featured extra roles in productions such as Jordon Prince-Wright's independent World War I feature film "Before Dawn" (2024) and the 1970s set Australian outback feature film "Kid Snow" (2024).

Additional feature extra and extras work in television, includes performing in two episodes of the second season of popular children's series 'ITCH' (2020); the Screenshot miniseries "The Claremont Murders" (2023); the Stan miniseries "Invisible Boys" (2025), currently in post-production; and season three of "The Twelve" (2025), currently in production.

Darren performed as the character "Sal" in the latest short-film project "Twelve Years" (2023) by filmmaker Alex Lorian, director of "Good for Nothing Blues" (2022) and "Subject 36" (2017).

He has been cast in supporting roles for two independent feature films, scheduled for release in 2025. As "Wayne Flanagan" in writer/director Brad Newland's latest independent feature film "Remotely Famous"; and as "Mick 'Popeye'" (and extras roles as two prison inmates) in "Frederickstown" by Adam Morris - writer/director of "Edward & Isabella" (2022) and "Frank & Frank (or The Valley and the Walrus: Ruminations on the Mystery from Soup to Nuts)" (2023).

Darren has credited his inspiration to pursue a career in film and television after his experience performing "off-screen" in a scene in the production of "Rams" (2020), opposite Australian actor Michael Caton (playing the character 'Les').

Additional work assisting in the blocking of numerous scenes with Director Jeremy Sims in the same production, further galvanised his desire to develop and expand his skills and experience in film performance.

He has trained in the 'Ivana Chubbuck Technique', under the expert guidance of actor Anthony Brandon Wong, known for "Matrix Revolutions" (2003), "Matrix Reloaded" (2003) and more recently, season two of the Binge mini-series "The Twelve" (2024), starring Sam Neill.
